7 EVENTS TO CHECK OUT IN NAPA VALLEY THIS SUMMER

There is never a lack of things to do in Napa Valley, but summer brings the region to life with a mix of free community events and long-standing ticketed traditions that appeal to locals and tourists alike. Here is a taste of the seasonal offerings you'll want to put on your calendars.

YOUNTVILLE MOVIES IN THE PARK

June 27, July 25 and Aug. 15: The Town of Yountville's Parks and Recreation Department hosts its annual Movies in the Park series at Yountville Community Park, 2900 Lincoln Ave. Concessions open at 6:30 p.m.; films begin at dusk. This year's film slate includes "Ratatouille" (June 27); "Inside Out 2" (July 25); and "Despicable Me 4" (Aug. 15). The July 25 showing coincides with Yountville's annual community camp out where guests are invited to set up tents for a full evening of festivities. Info: townofyountville.com.

FIRST THURSDAYS

July 3, Aug. 7 and Sept. 4: Napa debuts First Thursdays community festivals this summer, but the concept is a familiar one to long-time residents. The events, held 5-9 p.m. on the first Thursday of the month, are reminiscent of the Chefs Market that used to be held in downtown Napa. First Thursdays, now held at Oxbow Commons on McKinstry Street, offers a small farmers market, food trucks, artisanal and makers vendors' booths and live music. Farm vendors include Rodriguez Farms Strawberries, Gerard's Honey Bees and Living Green Micros. Food trucks scheduled for this season include Asian Burger, Cooked by Gio and Imagination on Fire. For a schedule of bands and full vendors list, visit donapa.com/first-thursdays.

CALISTOGA CONCERTS IN THE PARK

Thursdays through Aug. 14: Pioneer Park in Calistoga hosts live music every Thursday from 6:30-8:30 p.m. June through August. Attendees are encouraged to bring a picnic dinner, and food and wine vendors are available each week to keep the party going through the evening. This summer's lineup includes Michelle Lambert (July 3); Sacred Fire (July 10); Traveling Wilburys Revue (July 17); Pacific Standard (July 24); Johnny and June Forever (July 31); Boys of Summer (Aug. 7); and MAYA (Aug. 14). Pioneer Park is located at 1320 Cedar St. Info: visitcalistoga.com/concerts-in-the-park.

FESTIVAL NAPA VALLEY SUMMER SESSION

July 5-20: Festival Napa Valley's mission is to enrich lives through the power of music, and the Summer Session gives music lovers a variety of ways to engage with the arts across Napa Valley. In addition to live music, Summer Session includes Taste of Napa on July 12 at Meritage Resort in Napa — highlighting the best of food and wine in our region. Ticket prices range per event, but there are also free concerts, so this event has something for everyone at every price point. Multi-day passes and VIP Patron experiences available. Info: festivalnapavalley.org

SOFI BATTLE OF THE BANDS

July 27: Local bands perform throughout downtown Napa as part of the second annual Battle of the Bands, hosted by the SOFI (South of First) District. This year's event is scheduled from 11 a.m.-6 p.m. and will feature multiple stages with up to 20 performers. Last year's inaugural winner Weekend Youth was invited to play at BottleRock Napa Valley this year.

Free admission. For the latest details, visit instagram.com/napasofidistrict.

MUSIC IN THE VINEYARDS

Aug. 1-24: Music in the Vineyards is Napa Valley's signature chamber music festival, which showcases distinguished musicians and emerging young talent during its four-week season. With complimentary wine tastings at each intermission, this unique combination of wine country ambiance and musicianship allows audiences to experience chamber music in the small intimate settings. The event includes more than 20 events held throughout the Napa Valley, including open rehearsals that are free to the public. Info: musicinthevineyards.org.

BLACK RADIO EXPERIENCE

Aug. 29-31: The Blue Note Jazz Festival's Black Radio Experience returns to The Meritage Resort in Napa for the second consecutive year. This year's lineup features The Roots, Questlove, Jazmine Sullivan, Hiatus Kaiyote, Esperanza Spalding as well as Artist in Residence and curator Robert Glasper. From jazz, hip-hop and R&B to soul, spoken word and live DJ sets, the festival celebrates the sound, legacy and future of music in all its forms. Executive Chef Anthony Stagnaro, left, and Farm Director Nick Runkle harvest from the garden at Stanly Ranch for use at the onsite restaurant Bear on Wednesday, June 4.

A CULINARY COLLABORATION

MEET THE CHEF/FARMER DUO BEHIND BEAR AT STANLY RANCH

BY VINCENT VITALE

At Bear, the restaurant tucked within the scenic grounds of Stanly Ranch in Napa, the story of each dish begins long before it hits the plate — with the relationship between a farmer and a chef.

Executive Chef Anthony Stagnaro and Farm Director Nick Runkle collaborate closely to craft a dining experience rooted in the land, season by season. While Runkle tends the Grange — Bear's on-site garden — with an eye toward flavor, balance and biodiversity, Stagnaro and the team transform the harvest into striking dishes that honor each ingredient's essence.

According to press materials, at the helm of Bear's kitchen is Stagnaro, whose culinary vision has guided the restaurant since day one. With over two decades of experience, Stagnaro honed his craft under the mentorship of acclaimed chefs like Michael Voltaggio and Dominique Ansel, rising through the ranks to serve as both sous chef and executive chef. Today, he's pioneering a refined take on farm-to-table dining with what he calls "elemental cuisine" — a philosophy rooted in simplicity, where each dish is built around one standout ingredient sourced from trusted local growers. His approach celebrates the purity of flavor, letting the land speak through every plate.

Runkle, on the other hand, is the hands — and heart — behind the fields at Stanly Ranch. As farm director, Runkle spends his days planting seeds, pruning vines and mapping out future harvests, all while shaping the foundation of the ranch's culinary identity, according to press materials. Before bringing his expertise to Napa, he worked alongside the crops director at the famed Blue Hill at Stone Barns and collaborated with the innovative Row 7 Seed Company. It was through these deep-rooted connections to soil and seed that he and Stagnaro were invited to join Row 7's Grower & Chef Experimental Trials Network — a partnership that now fuels the hyper-seasonal approach to dining at Stanly Ranch.

To ensure the restaurant's success and focus on fresh daily produce, their mornings start early.

"We keep an order guide posted on the wall, and each night after service, the sous chefs and cooks meet to review what's needed for the following day," Stagnaro explained. "By 7 a.m. the next morning, the farm team picks up the list and harvests accordingly."

lettuce when it looks ready; Runkle and his team know the subtle differences between produce, including the ideal time to harvest for maximum flavor.

“The white Hakurei turnips we grow stay sweet and juicy even as they grow larger, unlike radishes, which can become spicier and more fibrous when they get too large. We like to harvest both turnips and radishes when they’re still small — about the size of a nickel,” said Runkle. These vegetables are harvested daily for the Bear’s vegetable plate.

Runkle also plants more unique seasonal ingredients. Mint, for instance, is its own adventure on the property.

“We’re currently growing four types of mint: Chocolate mint, orange mint, classic spearmint, and apple mint. Alongside those, we have lime balm, lemon balm and mandarin balm — fragrant herbs that also belong to the mint family,” said Runkle. The subtle flavors can be used for a variety of dishes, but also cocktails, like the perfect mint mojito.

Together, Stagnaro and Runkle collaborate in a natural, effortless way by meeting every morning — often multiple times a day — to brainstorm and align on everything from planting to plating.

“Because Nick and the farm team are part of the culinary team, they are involved in all chef-related meetings, service discussions and anything that impacts the guest experience. It’s a fully integrated relationship that makes the food stronger from the ground up,” Stagnaro continued. “It’s a simple, efficient system that keeps the kitchen and the farm in sync by ensuring the ingredients are as fresh and intentional as the dishes they’re used in.”

Stagnaro estimates that currently about 20% of Bear’s ingredients come directly from the farm.

“The rest is sourced as locally as possible, though it varies depending on the season,” he said. However, he sees this changing in the future.

“We hope to cut that number as much as we can, harvesting 50% directly from our own land and sourcing the remaining 50% as locally as possible. It’s an exciting step toward deeper sustainability and connection to our food,” he added.

Deciding on what to grow in the future is also a special process. About three months before the next season, Stagnaro and Runkle think through everything — flavor, texture, what ingredients were dif-difficult to source locally, and what worked well that they should expand upon.

“We also take a hard look at what didn’t work and discuss how improvements can be made or whether it’s time to move on from an ingredient entirely,” said Stagnaro.

The innovation process for new dishes is also unique. When Stagnaro begins thinking about new dishes, it always starts with the season and how they want the guests to feel. Whether it’s light, bright and green in spring or auburn-tinted and warm in fall, the emotional tone of the plate matters.

“The first tomatoes, honeynut squash, or fava leaves of the season often spark inspiration. Spending time with Nick during these transitions helps bring clarity to the creative process,” Stagnaro said. “From the bloom of spring flowers to the turning of fall leaves, nature always plays a central role in shaping what ends up on the plate.”

They choose seeds months in advance, sometimes even saving them from past harvests. It all begins in the greenhouse, where the seeds are started, and then the young plants are moved to the Grange to grow and take shape.

Throughout this process, Runkle and Stagnaro remain closely connected — observing, learning, and adjusting together. During these moments, Stagnaro imagines how to make these ingredients from the farm, or from nearby farmers, truly shine on the plate.

Together, they’re reshaping the landscape of California fine dining with a focus on elemental cooking.

This practice blends age-old techniques like open-fire preparation and natural fermentation with contemporary culinary precision.

Their partnership extends far beyond the farm rows; each crop is selected with a specific flavor experience in mind, ensuring the journey from soil to plate is intentional and seamless. The pair combines creative vision with seasoned know-how. What they create is more than food — an ongoing dialogue between the land and the kitchen, a reflection of Northern California’s seasonal soul and agricultural heartbeat. ■

GETTING TO KNOW YOU

Jeremy Jackson

Tell us about yourself and the Meet Me in Napa Podcast?

I've lived in Napa for almost five years, and creating a podcast has been something I've always wanted to do. Growing up in church, I was drawn to public speaking and always imagined myself as a radio or talk show host. The idea for Meet Me in Napa came to me at Olde Town Barbershop, where I'd hear incredible stories from locals and visitors alike — everyone from Hollywood stars to everyday people. I realized Napa lacked a media hub that captured these voices, so I created a platform to do just that.

What's your favorite part about your job?

My coworkers strike the perfect balance between professionalism and creating a relaxed atmosphere in the shop. The barbershop has become more than just a place for haircuts; it's where meaningful conversations happen. Through the barber chair, I've connected with the community in a deeper, more intimate way than I ever imagined.

What's your favorite way to spend a day off?

Lately, most of my free time is spent working on podcast content, juggling social media (and, let's be honest, sometimes just scrolling too long), and spending quality time with my family. It's a constant balancing act, but all of it fuels my vision.

What was the best vacation you ever took and why?

For my honeymoon, I traveled to Europe and Asia.

Where's the next place on your travel bucket list and why?

Africa! I want to see the motherland.

What are your hobbies, and how did you get into them?

Lately, I've been building my record collection and exploring the world of wine.

Growing up, I was always fascinated by my uncle's record collection, which inspired me to curate my own. As for wine, my passion for it really took off after moving to Napa. Being in the valley, I'm constantly drawn to the local culture, the stories behind the bottles, and the craftsmanship in every glass.

What was the last book you read?

Quincy Jones's "12 Notes: On Life and Creativity."

What is your favorite movie?

"Mo' Better Blues."

What was the last TV show you binge-watched?

"Game of Thrones."

If you could only eat one food for the rest of your life, what would it be?

Peach cobbler.

What's your favorite quote from a TV show/movie/book?

"Have ya paid your dues, Jack?" "Yessir, the check is in the mail."

- Big Trouble in Little China

What's one thing that can instantly make your day better?

Driving up the 29 looking at the hills and vineyards.

How do you take your coffee?

Naysayers!!!

COURTESY PHOTO

What's your favorite way to unwind?

Lay on the couch endlessly search for a show while falling asleep.

What causes are you passionate about?

Misplaced youth and homelessness.

Who do you most like spending time with and why?

My kids, cause I know when they get older, they'll be on their own journey in life.

Do you have any hidden talents?

My ability to connect with people across all levels of life. ■
